FREDERICK R. ZIERATH
Brigadier General
Assistant Division Commander

Colonel Elisha O. Peckham

Elisha O. Peckham was born in Hopkinton, Rhode Island, 11 March 1913, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Peckham. He was graduated from the University of Rhode Island with a Bachelor of Science degree in engineering and a commission in the reserve as a 2nd Lt., Infantry, 9 June 1934.

From July 1935 to June 1940 he was on duty with the Civilian Conservation Corps, and in July 1940 was assigned to the 26th Infantry Regiment, 1st Infantry Division station at Fort Devens, Mass. In May of the following year Colonel Peckham was reassigned to the 18th Infantry Regiment, 1st Infantry Division, and served with that unit throughout World War II. While with the 18th Infantry he participated in the assault landing of North Africa, Sicily and Normandy. In July of 1944 Colonel Peckham assumed command of the 3d battalion of the 18th Infantry and continued in this position to the termination of hostilities in 1945.

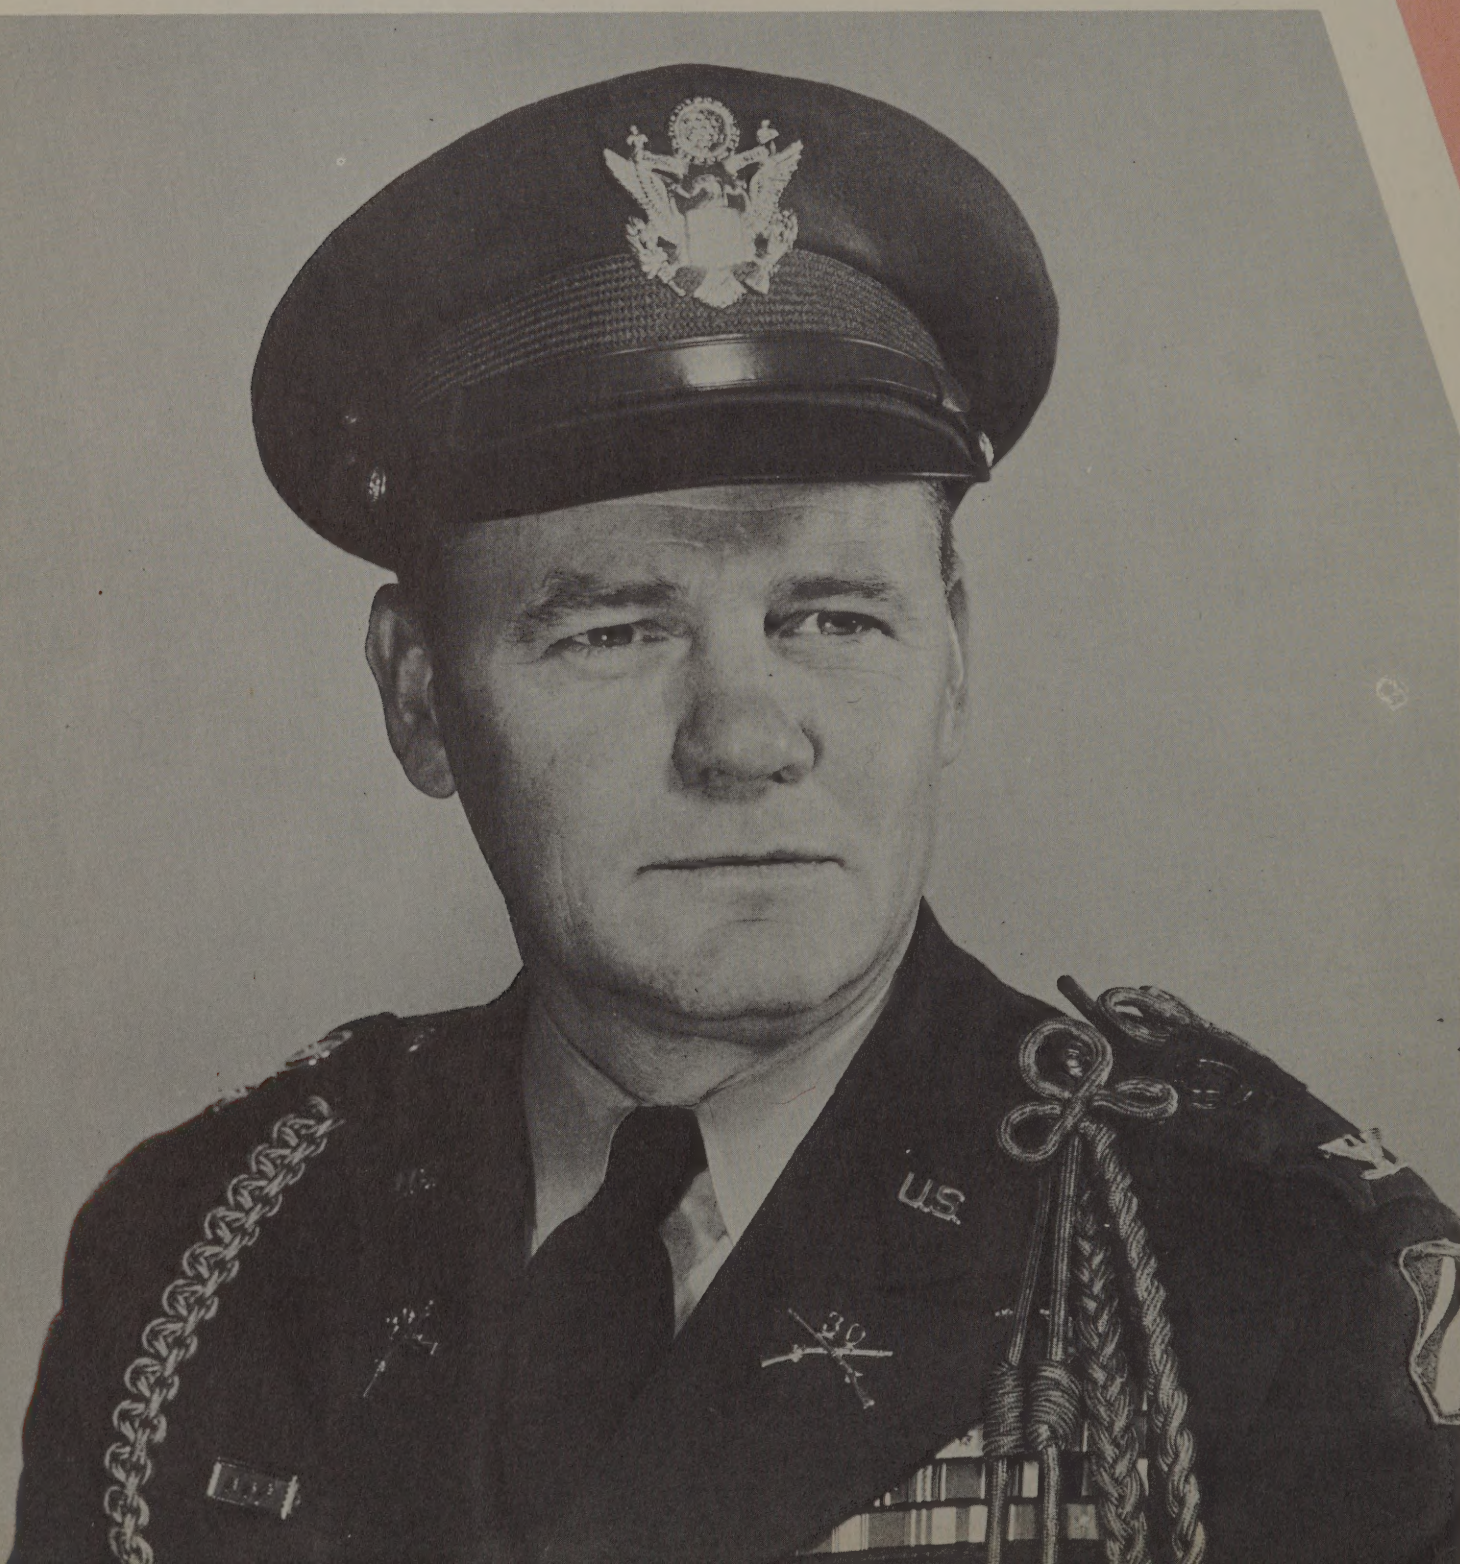

Colonel Peckham returned to the United States in October 1945 and was assigned to the faculty of the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Georgia from December of that year to August 1947. He entered the Command and General Staff College in 1947 and upon graduation the following year remained as an instructor until 1952.

In September 1952 Colonel Peckham was assigned to the 351st Infantry Regiment in Trieste as Regimental Executive Officer, and was later appointed Regimental Commander of that regiment. He was assigned to Headquarters, USAREUR in January 1954 and appointed Chief Operations Plans Section G-3, USAREUR and Chief Operations Section, G-3 NATO Central Army Group.

Colonel Peckham returned to the United States in July 1955 and entered the Army War College that same year. Upon completion of the course in 1956 he was assigned to the 3d Infantry Division, Fort Benning, Georgia as Commander of the 30th Infantry Combat Command.

During World War II, Colonel Peckham was awarded the Silver Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Bronze Star with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Purple Heart, the Croix de Guerre (French) with Silver Star, the Fourragere in the colors of the Croix de Guerre, the Combat Infantry Badge and the Distinguished Unit Badge with three Oak Leaf Clusters.

Colonel Peckham was appointed to First Lieutenant, Infantry Reserve 6 July 1937; to Captain, Infantry Reserve 2 February 1942; to Major AUS 11 January 1943; to Lt. Colonel AUS 24 August 1944; to Colonel AUS 16 June 1953. He was intergraded in the Regular Army in 1946.

As members of the Thirtieth Infantry Combat Command, you have shared proud traditions and a heritage won only by the determination and sacrifice of those men who have stood in our ranks before you. You have demonstrated by performance and devotion to duty, your worthiness to stand in these same ranks, and your accomplishments will serve as a standard to be emulated by those who will follow you.

Therefore it is with a sense of pride and privilege that I dedicate this pictorial edition to the history of the 30th Infantry and to those who have served and are now serving in the "Rock of the Marne" Regiment.

In July of 1918, the German army, confident of ultimate victory, and at the peak of morale and offensive momentum, launched what has been historically named "The Marne Offensive." The Thirtieth Infantry Regiment as part of the Third Infantry Division, was defending in the Champagne-Marne Sector; it was the 30th Infantry Regiment which caught the very spearhead of the German attack, and battled the full force of the heaviest of offensive powers. A detailed account of this historic battle is published describing "The Battle of the Marne."

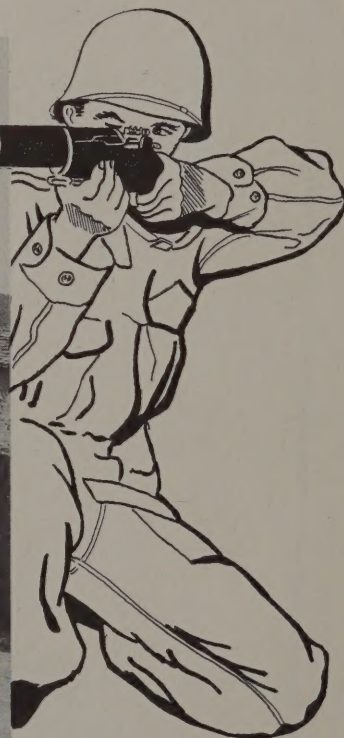

"As an incident of the battle south of the Marne might be mentioned the defense of the sector south of Jaulgonne, which has been termed the most brilliant single feat of American arms in the War.

The 30th U. S. Infantry, under Colonel Butts, had prepared for the attack by building numerous trenches for the German army to photograph, and for the artillery to register on, and more numerous rifle pits and machine gun nests carefully camouflaged or concealed. By day the trenches were occupied, by night the rifle pits. The German artillery preparation had wiped out every trench, but the infantry in its pits and nests, despite heavy losses, accounted for more than its numbers in German dead, and turned back the attack of a division. The result of this battle was the beginning of a great morale reversal, which was to find its completion in the ensuing counter attack at Soissons.

Until the attack of July 15th, the Germans had been confident of success. The attack showed them that they could no longer command it. The Allied troops, on the contrary, were buoyed up by the fact that not only had a way been found to stop the German attacks, but they had been stopped with far lighter losses to the defenders than the attackers."

It was for this momentous engagement that the colors of the Regiment were decorated with the French Croix de Guerre with Palm. The Commander-in-Chief of the French army, Marshal Petain, presented the 30th Infantry Regiment with the following citation: "This seasoned Regiment of the American Army, which under the energetic and able leadership of its commanding officer, Colonel E. L. Butts, has shown fidelity to its traditions in meeting the principal shock of the German attack of July 15th, 1918 on the front of the Army Corps to which it had been attached. Under a very violent bombardment, which caused great losses; it repulsed all enemy power, and maintained the integrity of its positions in taking more than 200 prisoners."

In World War I, the 30th Infantry established a reputation which it has never failed to uphold with honor and distinction. Military historians will never forget the Aisne Defensive, the Chateau-Thierry Sector, the Champagne-Marne Defensive paving the way for the Aisne-Marne Offensive, the Vesle Section, and the Meuse-Argonne Offensive shattering the final German defenses.

Surrounding mountainous terrain necessitated part of the 3rd Division to use mules and manpower to carry supplies into the city. Italy, September 22, 1943.

history

of the 30th Infantry

The old Regimental Crest, the cover photograph, was designed after World War I to immortalize the role played by the 30th Infantry in victory; solidly behind its Motto, "Our Country, Not Ourselves," there begins to emerge a history of service and sacrifice, glory and achievement in arms of which one can be deeply proud.

On the 29th of January in 1957, the Thirtieth Infantry Regiment will be 144 years old. The organization of the original 30th Infantry was begun by an Act of Congress on 29 January 1813 for participation in the War of 1812 against Great Britain. At the conclusion of this war in 1815, the Regiment was consolidated with a Light Artillery Regiment, and remained so organized until the War Between the States, when it fought with the Union forces from 1861 to 1865.

The present 30th Infantry Regiment was formed by an Act of Congress on 2 February 1901, and organized at Presidio of San Francisco, California. The Regiment was ordered quickly prepared for service against Aguinaldo in the Philippine Insurrection. It was at this time that General of the Army (then 2d Lt.) George C. Marshall joined the Regiment and was assigned to Company "G" as a Platoon Leader. This was his first military assignment.

For more than forty years the history of the Thirtieth Infantry Regiment has been intimately associated with Presidio, and the city of San Francisco, California.

Fifty years ago the Regiment's initial training took place in Presidio prior to sailing for the Philippine Islands to battle in the Aguinaldo Insurrection in 1901.

On the fourth of July, 1907, the Regiment again assembled at Presidio of San Francisco, for a second tour of duty in the Philippine Islands. By 1909 the Regiment was again in Presidio, and in 1914 the 30th Infantry trained in Presidio for the splendid role it played in World War I.

After the First World War, when the Regiment had completed a tour of occupation duty at Mayen near Coblenz, Germany, it returned to the United States and passed four years in various posts throughout the country.

In August of 1922, the 30th Infantry returned to Presidio of San Francisco, which was to be the Regiment's permanent station until the turmoil of war in Europe again carried the Regiment overseas in 1941.

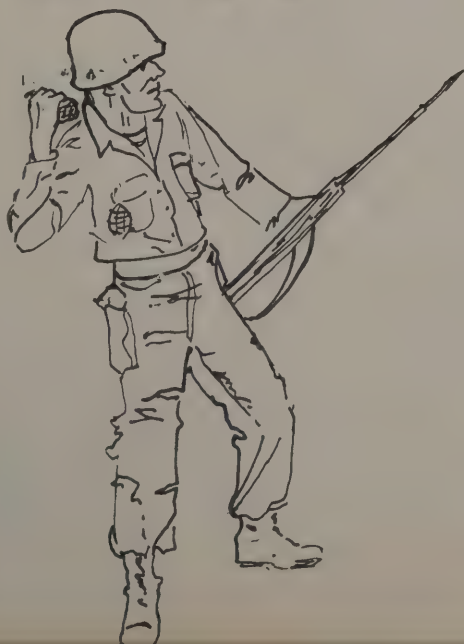

Between the Wars, during this eighteen year period of peace, the Regiment took an intimate and active part in San Francisco's civic and military life. The 30th Infantry came to be affectionately known as "San Francisco's Own." The Regiment is the only one in the United States Army authorized two Regimental Colors: the San Francisco colors and the Department of the Army Regimental Colors.

Throughout the Thirties the Regiment developed a reputation of being one of the outstanding "spit and polish" regiments of the United States Army, with a band that became famous within the service for its unequalled excellence.

During these years also, the 30th Infantry was pioneering in a field of military operations which was soon to become of prime importance to the United States. First in 1937, and again in 1940, the Regiment engaged in summer maneuvers at Camp Ord near Salinas and Monterey; in the summer of 1937 it participated in the first Pacific Coast army amphibious operations. Little did the Regiment realize that the instructions learned from this training were to make possible so many glorious operations in the war to come.

The practice landings were made on San Clemente Island off San Diego with the original Higgins boats.

In 1939-40 the Regiment sent their famous Infantry Color Guard Company to the San Francisco International Exposition on Treasure Island. The Soldiers of the Third Division were among the first to arrive in this Italian town, September 22, 1943.

daily demonstrations and ceremonies performed by this company were of the greatest attractions to people from the world over attending the Exposition.

With war impending, the 30th Infantry was charged with working out in full detail the plans for defense of the city of San Francisco against attack from the sea.

The first "inductees" joined the 30th Infantry on 21 January 1941 and in April the Regiment departed Presidio to rejoin the 3d Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Washington.

Continuing with ever-increasing momentum, the Regiment captured Holzwihr, Wickerswihr and Neuf-Brisach followed with the fall of Colmar and the important liquidation of the Colmar pocket. The Regiment was then relieved from attachment to the French First Army and swung north to become the first Regiment of the Division to breach the vaunted Siegfried Line at Zweibrücken.

As the ring tightened on central Germany, the Regiment forced a crossing of the Rhine at Worms against determined resistance, and raced on across Germany. The 30th was the first in Heppenheim, Bad Kissingen, and the inner city of Nurnberg.

Infantrymen of the 30th Infantry searching for snipers advance cautiously through the flaming city of Zweibrücken, Germany.

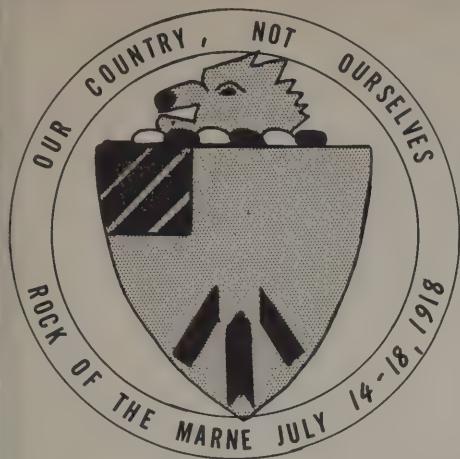

Through Africa, Sicily, Italy, across the Volturno River to Mt. Rotondo which guards the approaches to Cassino, the Regiment followed the historic footprints of centuries of conquering armies. It was part of the hell that was Anzio followed by the hard-won breakout and dash to Rome. The Regiment's landing in southern France was the fourth successful amphibious operation; taking Flassans, Brignoles, Aix-en-Provence and Besancon in stride, over the snow-covered Vosges Mountains it fought—to become the first army in history ever to perform this feat. The Regiment then, without respite, swung onto the St. Die hill mass in the Mortagne Forest, across the Meurthe River, through Grendelbruch and out to the Rhine on the plains of Strasbourg.

Here the Regiment was ordered to precede the 3d Division onto the snow-covered Vosges to capture Kayersberg, and to close a dangerous gap which had been smashed between the American and French forces. Joined again by the entire Division, the Regiment forced a crossing of the Ill River, holding a bridgehead without any armor support against overwhelming odds in a fierce battle. Con-

After helping in the capture of Augsburg, a crossing was made of the Lech River astride the Autobahn; the last organized resistance in Germany had been met, and the speed of advance never allowed German armies to reorganize, as the Regiment was the first to fight its way into Munich. Vital bridges were then taken over the Inn River at Rosenheim, and the Regiment rolled into Salzburg and Berchtesgaden, exploding the myth of a final German stand in the "Southern Redoubt Area," and the War ended.

"We, whom God has spared, offer this our record of achievement, half humbly, half proudly. Humbly, because we know the terrible price in life and limb our regiment paid for victory. Proudly, because we as an Infantry regiment in thirty-one months of almost continuous combat never failed to take an assigned objective."

These words of General (then Colonel) McGarr, World War II commander of the 30th Infantry Regiment, are a right prelude to a recapitulation of the 30th Infantry's achievements in arms during the Second World War.

With the completion of the campaign in Germany and Austria, and the final victory over the Nazi war machine, the 30th Infantry Regiment ended its combat activities in World War II, activities which commenced in the dark hours before that grey dawn of 8 November 1942, when the fighting men of the Regiment stormed ashore at Fedala, French Morocco, in their first amphibious assault to open the long-awaited second front.

The Regiment has been highly decorated; as members of the 3d Infantry Division, all personnel of the Regiment were entitled to wear the French Fourragere in the colors of the Croix de Guerre, and the Distinguished Unit Badge. The Regiment itself had been twice recommended for award of Distinguished Unit Citation; first, for the bloody Anzio breakout; second, for the capture of Kayersberg in the frozen Colmar pocket, and sealing of the penetration between the American and French forces in that area.

The Medal of Honor, the highest decoration our nation gives, had been awarded to twelve officers and men of the 30th Infantry. The Distinguished Service Cross, the second highest, was awarded to fifty-eight members. Other decorations include nine hundred and twenty-five Silver Stars, thirty-one Soldiers Medals, and twelve hundred and twenty-six Bronze Stars.

On 1 December 1948, the 30th Infantry Regiment was transferred to Fort Benning, Georgia. It was, however, a transfer in name only, for there were no troops assigned to the Regiment at this time.

Here the Regiment has remained. A new cadre assembled on 25 January 1949, and by 24 February the future members of the 30th began to arrive from such training centers as: Camp Breckenridge, Camp Chaffee, Fort Dix, Fort Ord, Camp Pickett, and Fort Riley.

The Regiment had been reconstituted as "School Troops" for The Infantry School, and was not ordered into the Korean Conflict, but performed the all-important task of training men for combat. Anyone who has ever taken a course at The Infantry School certainly will remember that it is the 30th Infantry Regiment in every tactical problem fighting "The Battle of Fort Benning."

The 30th Infantry Regiment is now the provisionally organized, 30th Infantry Combat Command, and, as in the past, is part of the 3d Division, engaged in testing new concepts in infantry organization.

Implicit within its present organization, and the men who form the strength of its corps, is all the history and tradition which has made the 30th Infantry Regiment one of the greatest in the United States Army.

The present 30th Infantry Regimental Crest was designed by the Heraldic Division of the Quartermaster General, Department of the Army and approved 29 December 1948.

The predominant colors are blue and silver. As the Regiment was in the 3d Division, the Divisional insignia is at the upper left of the canton. The broken chevron at the bottom of the canton represents the part taken by the Regiment in pushing back the point of the German drive at the Marne on 15 July 1918, for which the Regiment was cited by the French government. Because of its warlike and combative nature, the boar's head was selected to represent the subsequent passage of the Regiment through the German lines for the occupation of German territory.

Company B—6th Infantry Battalion (Prov.)

M/Sgt. Moss assisting trainees with their M-1 troubles.

Developing the true "spirit of the bayonet."

On the firing line.

"Fix bayonets." "High port."
"Move out."

Communications, the trainees are learning, is the life line of the Army.

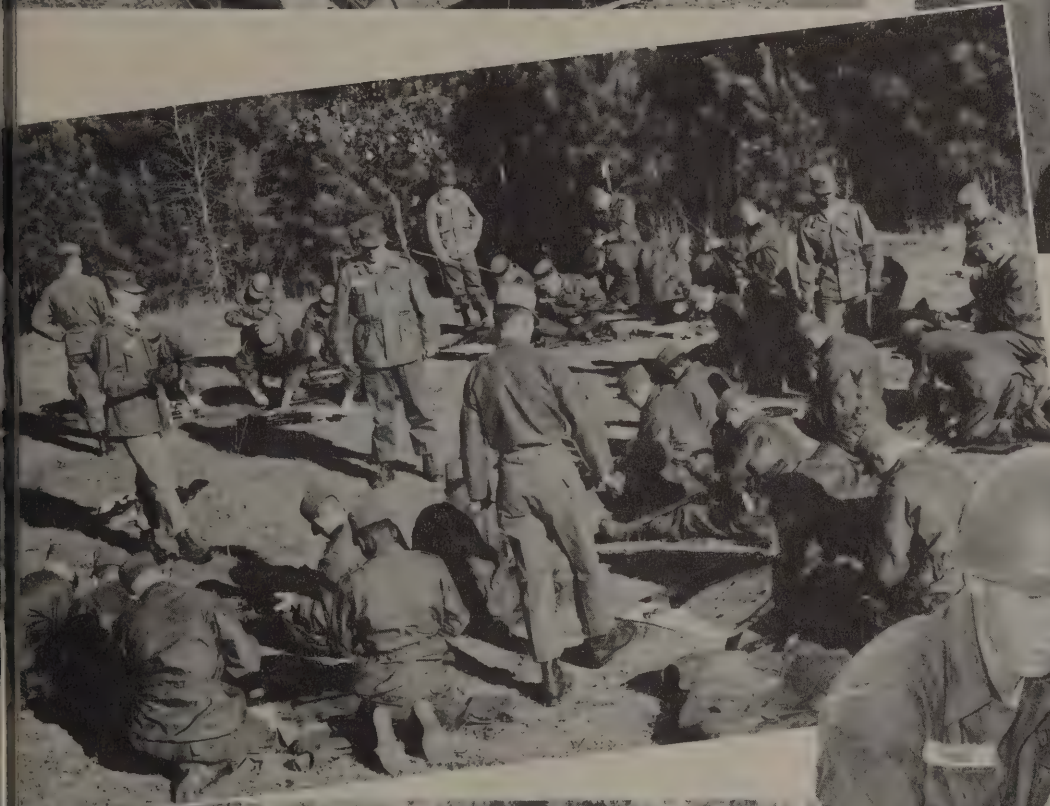

Trainees take their M-1's apart for the first time, but there are many times to follow.

They learn about the gas mask—the hard way.

Lt. Erickson and cadre watching trainees tear down the M-1.

Trainees writing down their co-ordinates at starting point on map reading course.

Basic trainees in the 3d Infantry Division today will find a new modern Army, one that has kept pace with the changing times. Uniforms, weapons and training reflect this progress. A trim, well-groomed basic finds the most effective weapons available for his use. The most modern completely realistic training is employed. Emphasis, in the 3d Division's concept of atomic warfare, is still placed on the individual soldier. Officers and cadre devote considerable attention to the making of this soldier — one who is able to think for himself and understand his responsibility.

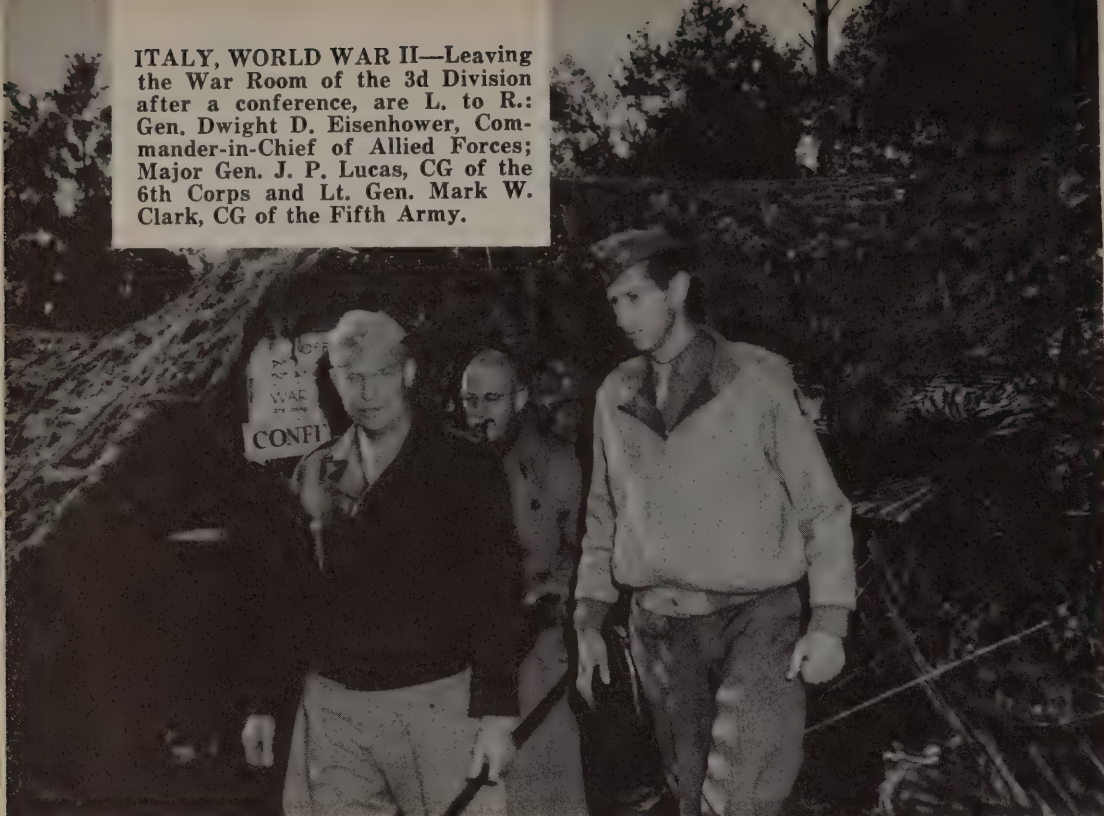

On previous pages units were shown during their basic training. At first the time seemed to go slowly. Then, all of a sudden, the swing of training took hold. Everything began to make sense. Weeks flew by and basic combat training came to an end. The routine, the friends, the lessons and the rugged hours in the field or on the infiltration course were all behind.

Basic training is the first and perhaps the most important training in the Army. In keeping with this idea, the 3d Infantry Division typifies the new Army — backed by old traditions.

ITALY, WORLD WAR II—Leaving the War Room of the 3d Division after a conference, are L. to R.: Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Commander-in-Chief of Allied Forces; Major Gen. J. P. Lucas, CG of the 6th Corps and Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, CG of the Fifth Army.

falling back and the Division was fighting on both flanks as well as to the front, reportedly answered, "Nous Resterons La"—translated "We're Staying There."

The Blue and White shoulder patch of the Third Division also came out of the World War I period. It was originated by Brigadier General Preston Brown who commanded the Division in the last campaign of the war, The Meuse-Argonne Offensive. The three white stripes are indicative of the numerical designation of the Division as well as the three major battles of the war. The blue field is symbolic of soldierly loyalty and steadfast devotion to principles of right and justice. Also considered in designing the patch was the appearance of the pattern of equal stripes in contrasting colors after the manner of the National Flag.

The Division returned to the United States in 1919, and until 1922, served at various posts over the country. At that time, the Division Headquarters was moved to Fort Lewis, Washington, and

★ 3d Infantry Division ★

★ HISTORY ★

The 3d (Regular) Infantry Division was organized 21 November 1917, at Camp Greene, North Carolina, for service in the first great world emergency of our time. It has served continually since then and served outstandingly in World War I, World War II, and the Korean Conflict.

The 3d Division entered combat as a unit on 30 May 1918, and took an active part in the Aisne Offensive, Chateau-Thierry Sector (Champagne campaign streamer), Champagne-Marne Defensive, Aisne-Marne Offensive, St. Mihiel Offensive, and Meuse-Argonne Offensive. This was followed by nine months of occupation duty in the Meyen District of Germany.

The Champagne-Marne Defensive resulted in both the official nickname—"The Marne Division"; and the unofficial motto—"Nous Resterons La," translated "We're Staying There," which the Division carries today. In July 1918, the Division was responsible for holding the Allied line south of the Marne River when units on each side of the Division were forced to fall back under heavy German attack; thus the nickname, "The Marne Division." The motto is attributed to Major General Joseph T. Dickman, then Division Commander, who, when asked what the 3d Division was going to do when the units on each side were its component units settled at various posts. This condition continued until 1940 when all divisions were triangularized and training for a state of war began. It is of interest that the 3d Division was one of only three Regular Army Divisions in existence prior to September 1939.

24 October 1942, again saw the Division departing for overseas service—destination: French Morocco. The Division entered combat, 8 November 1942, and from then until the end of the war was in almost constant contact with the enemy. The 3d Division was the only American Division to fight the Nazi forces on every front, and as a result it is the proud wearer of 10 battle stars—more than any other division that fought in Europe.

After the end of hostilities the Division served on occupation duty for over a year in Austria and Germany. It was then stationed at Camp Campbell, Kentucky; and later, at Fort Benning, Georgia, where it was located when the Korean Conflict arose.

The Division sailed for Korea the last of August 1950, and after regrouping at Moji, Japan, arrived in Korea beginning 10 November 1950. Its first action was to assist in holding the Port of Hamhung open when the Chinese forces entered the Korean Conflict. It was through this port that the United Nations' forces withdrew after the Chinese intervention, and the 3d Division was the last to leave the area.

The Division went from Hamhung to Pusan by ship and then began the overland trip north. The 3d Division launched the first counteroffensive of the war against the Chinese Communists 15 January 1951, reached the Han River 9 February 1951, entered Seoul 15 March 1951, and a few days later had pushed the enemy back across the 38th Parallel above the town of Ui-Jong-Bu.

The Division bore the brunt of the 1st Communist Spring Offensive 22-23 April and withdrew to, but held, Seoul. It was for this action that the Division was awarded its first Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citation. On 16 May, the 2d Spring Offensive was launched by the Communists and again the Division played a major part in stemming the "red tide." After the 2d offensive was rolled back, the Division moved to the "Iron Triangle" area and captured Chorwon and Pyonggan, two points of the triangle. It was for the "Iron Triangle" action that the Division was awarded its second Presidential Unit Citation from the Republic of Korea.

KOREAN CONFLICT—General J. Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff, U. S. Army (front seat), and Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, CG, U. S. Eighth Army (back seat), pause along roadside to greet Col. William Harris, CO, 65th Infantry Regiment, 3d Infantry Division, during their tour of inspection at the Korean fighting front.

The 3d Division remained in the general area of the "Iron Triangle" until the fall of 1954 when its colors and records returned to Fort Benning, Georgia, where the personnel and equipment of the 47th Division were transferred to the Third Division. The 47th Infantry Division was returned to state control and again became a National Guard Unit.

The Battle Honors and Decorations of the Third Division are:

World War I Campaign Streamers: Aisne, Champagne-Marne, Champagne, Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne.

World War II Campaign Streamers: Algeria-French Morocco, Tunisia, Sicily, Naples-Foggia, Anzio, Rome-Arno, Southern France, Rhineland, Ardennes-Alsace, Central Europe.

World War II Decorations: Distinguished Unit Streamer, embroidered "Colmar"; Streamer in the colors of the French Croix de Guerre with Palm, embroidered "Colmar"; Fourragere in the colors of the French Croix de Guerre.

Korean Conflict Campaigns: CCF Intervention, First U. N. Counteroffensive, CCF Offensive, U. N. Summer-Fall Offensive, Second Korean Winter, Korea Summer-Fall 1952, Third Korean Winter, Korea Summer-Fall 1953.

Korean Conflict Decorations: Streamer in the colors of the Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citation, embroidered "Uijongbu Corridor"; Streamer in the colors of the Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citation, embroidered "Iron Triangle."

And the 3d
Infantry Division has a welcome for all!

Welcoming & Processing

A welcoming word from the Commanding General opened the first days in basic training and a trip through processing put over the change from civilian to soldier. Assignment and classification gave you a "place" in that new life.

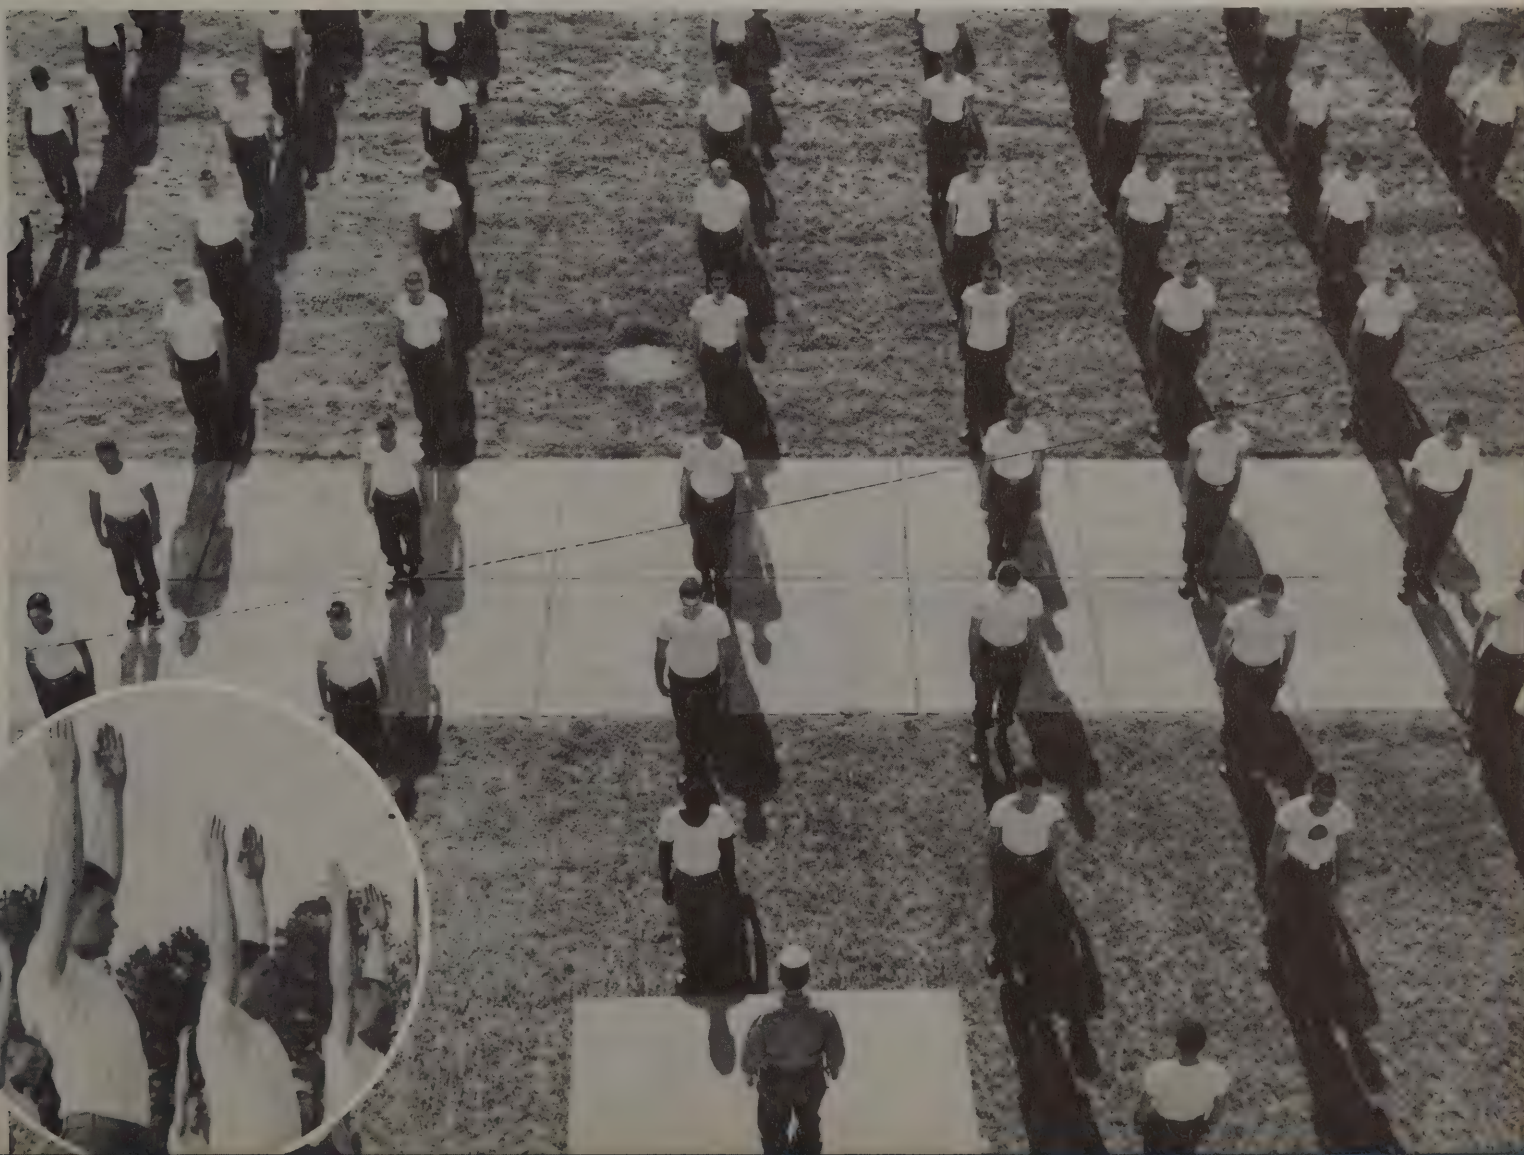

You were amazed how quickly you learned to salute

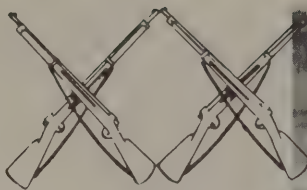

First Days

And scrubbing down the barracks was one job they never forgot.

Physical exercise, P.T. that was, conditioned you for the fast-paced schedule.

Preliminary rifle instruction in sighting and aiming.

Drill was important at this early stage. Before long, "Dress right, dress," looked sharp.

An evening in the barracks might have meant a session where you learned to master the helmet liner.

The demonstration of assault landing tactics with the H-19 helicopter held your interest.

A lesson in directing fire of the deadly .81 mm mortar.

Your rifle and you!

Over the wall and on to the A-t-t-a-c-k!

Keeping in step! How long did it take you?

"Every minute counts!" That's when hasty fortification training helped.

Sand table tactics helped trainees to understand the real thing.

Lecture periods of instruction, such as this Field Fortification talk, were spaced in with the more active hours.

Numerous classes were held with training aids which taught you to take normal precautions to prevent minor and major ailments.

The coach-pupil technique of rifle training improved firing accuracy. Marksmanship scores started to climb after long hours on the range.

On bivouac, trainees got a chance to prove what they had learned about combat tactics.

First aid proficiency testing made sure you knew what to do for a buddy in case of injury.

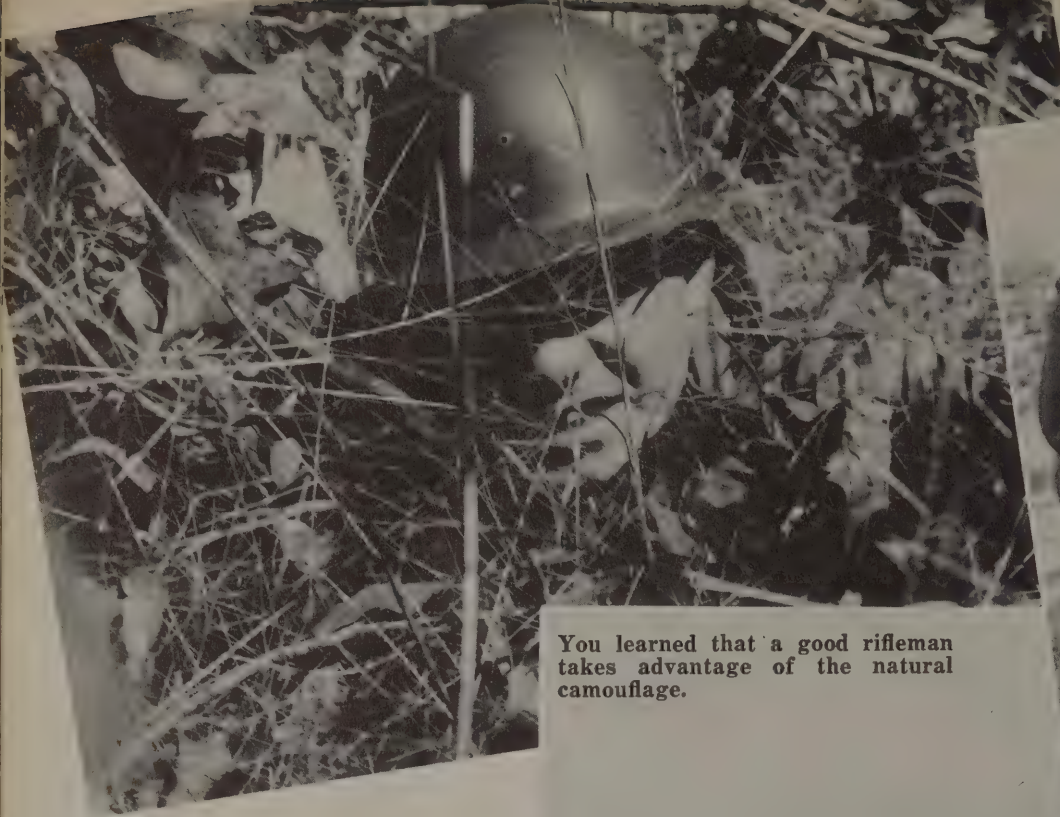

"Where are you?" and "Where were you going?" were elementary when the map reading course was mastered.

"Spirit of the Bayonet"

The bayonet assault course dummy gets a belly full of cold steel.

You learned that a good rifleman takes advantage of the natural camouflage.

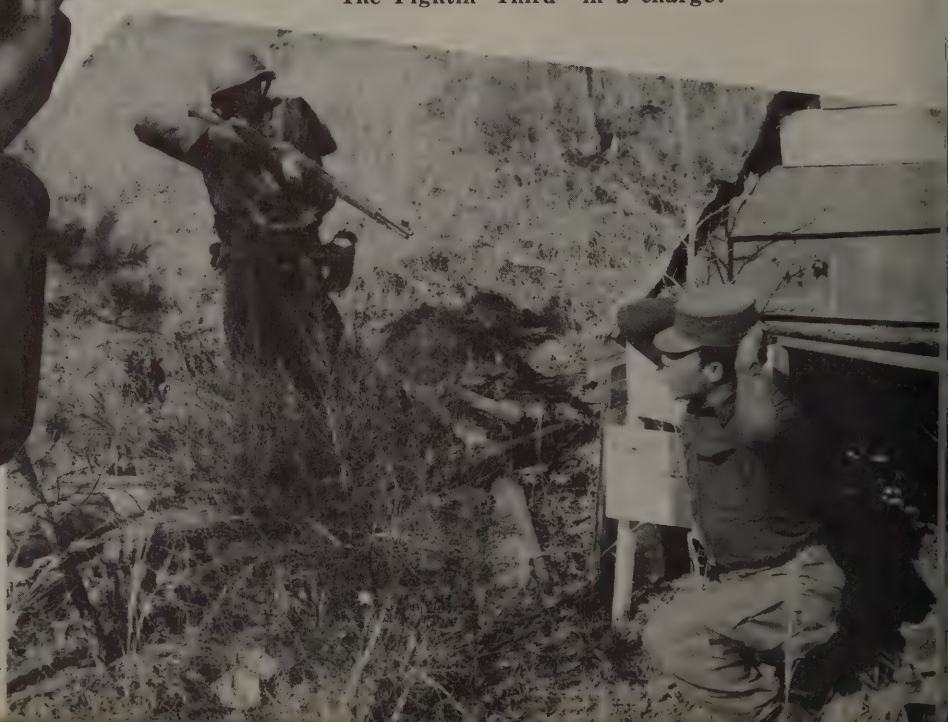

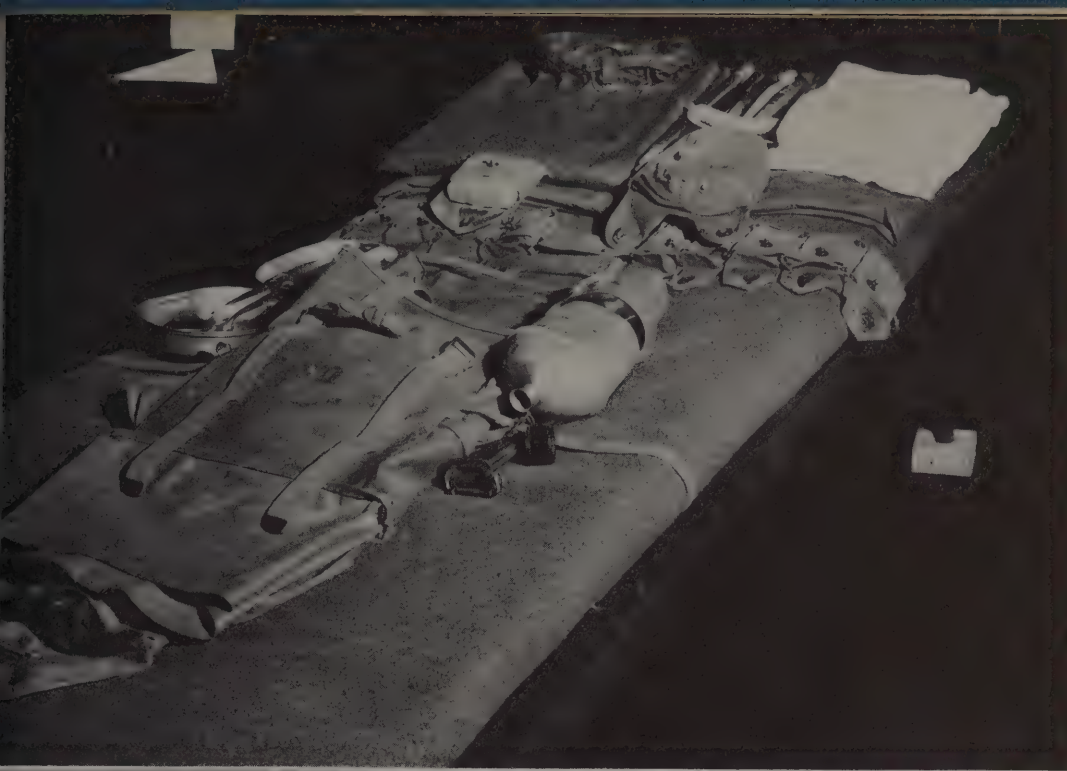

Dead aim!

"The Fightin' Third" in a charge!

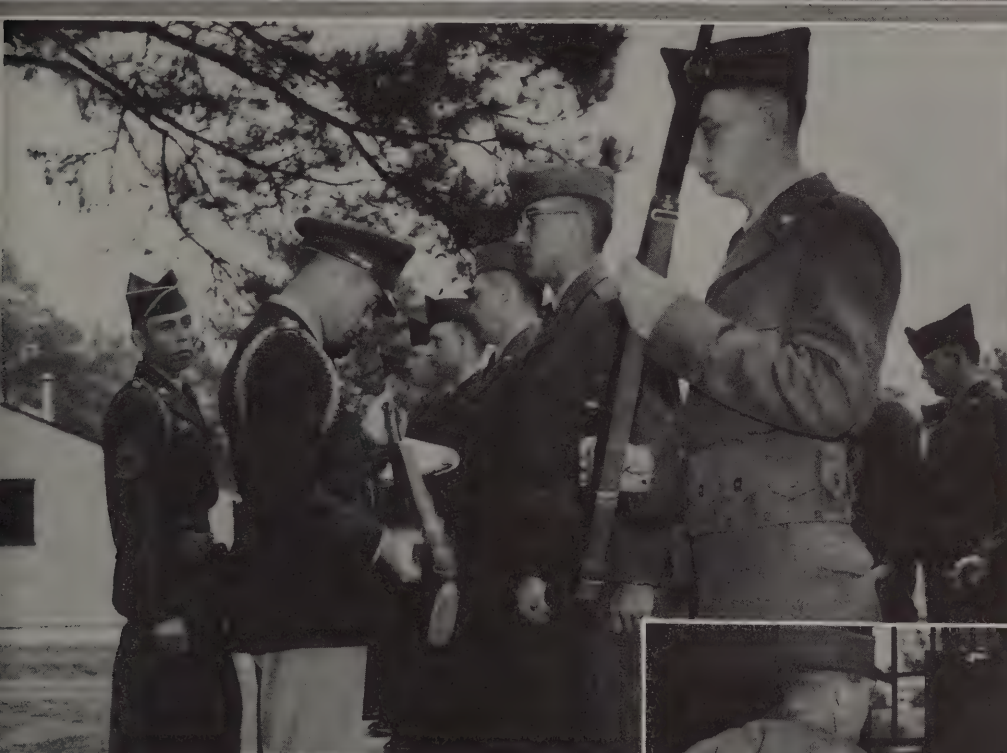

An "enemy" is captured during field exercise.

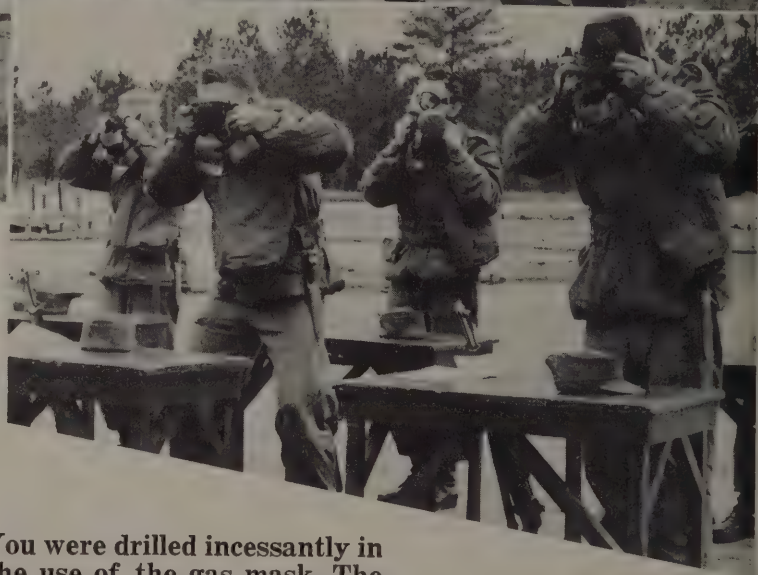

Inspection came round regularly and you soon had the know-how to avoid those demerits. You thought you were ready until the inspecting officer found that tell-tale spot of dirt.

Inspections

Firing for Score . . .

You were drilled incessantly in the use of the gas mask. The aim was to instill in the trainee the ability to use the gas mask properly and build confidence in the mask as a protection from chemical attack.

Working with tanks, trainees soon respected them as an invaluable aid on the combat field.

Don't worry, you ducked!

Correct techniques in throwing the hand grenade played an important part in your arms training.

"Pull pin . . . aim . . . let it blast!"

Mine and booby trap study including setting up charges and the actual detection and identification of enemy mines.

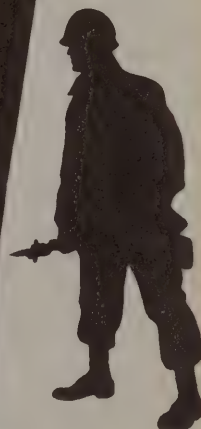

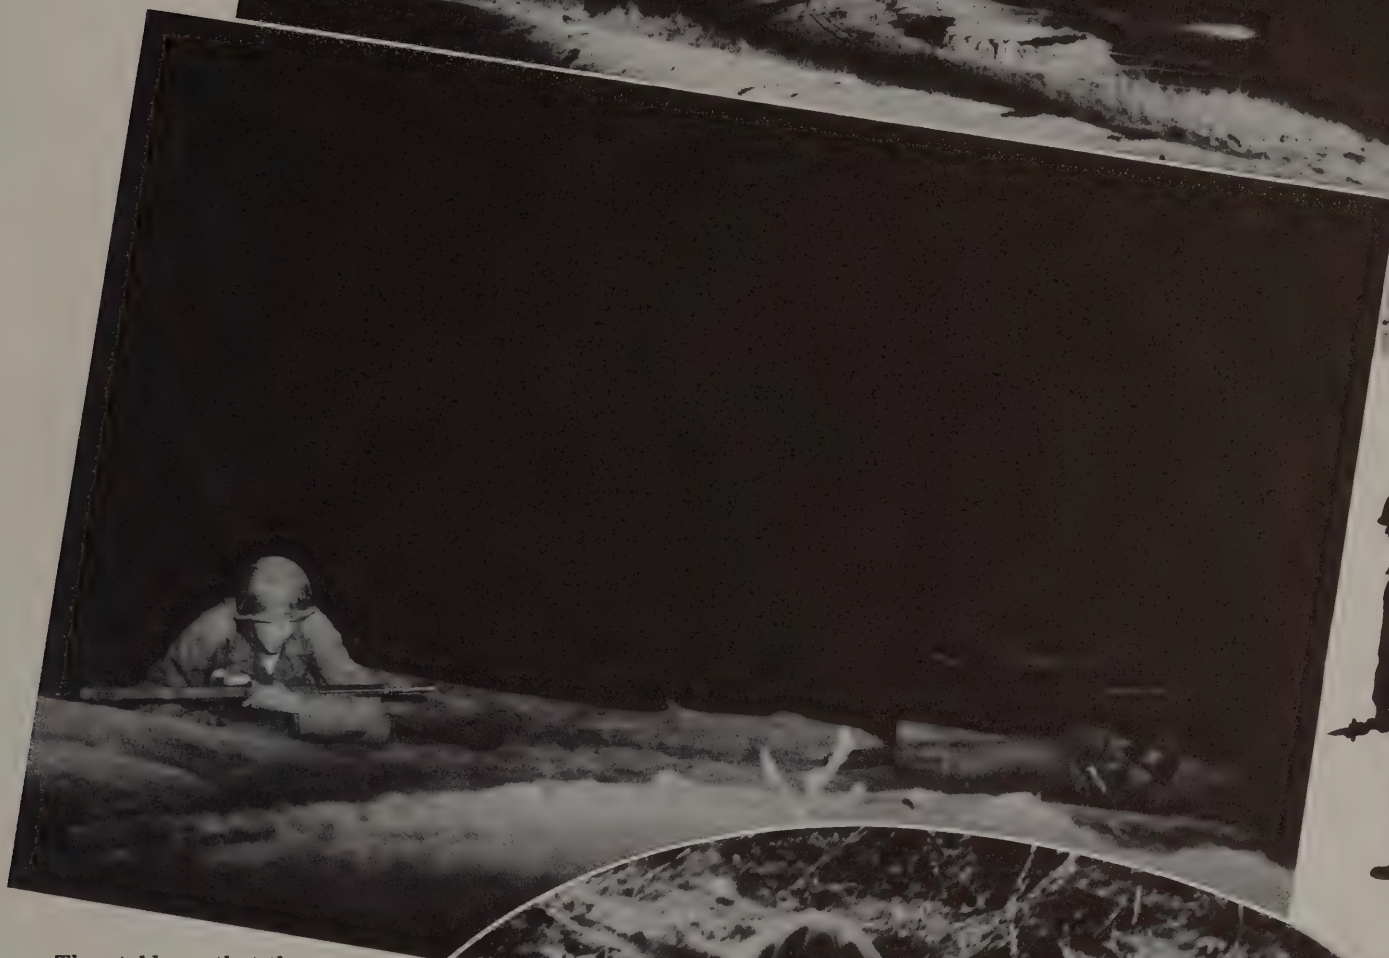

The rifle grenade—a small package of big firepower for the infantryman.

They told you that the army marches on its stomach — but they weren't talking about chow — they also forgot to mention crawling on our backs. Here they served up half-pound blocks of T.N.T., "live" machine gun bullets and huge quantities of dirt and sand garnished with barbed wire.

"You gotta get under . . . get out and get under!" True words on the Infiltration Course.
